This week Kyle DeWoody and I, co-founder of Artlog, tackle Armory Week in NYC.

Kyle DeWoody

What I'm excited to see this week. Let's see. I'm mostly excited for the new, so while the Armory is like a giant text book of current art, it's harder to find new artists. I'm ambitiously planning to hit every fair, but am most excited about Independent. Fingers crossed there will be some great pieces I can afford.

Monday night I'll be checking out Zabludowicz Collection, of which I have no knowledge, so I'm quite intrigued. Tuesday I'm going to head over to Salon Zürcher, showing only six galleries, mostly from Brooklyn, including my friends at Journal.

Meghan Boody is an awesome artist who is in two shows this week Tuesday she opens at Affirmation Arts and Friday at James Salomon's gallery in a show called Psyche & Smut Lives. How can you miss that? Also on Friday night is a one night production of Upon My Word at the Players Club. It's a period musical raunch comedy and it's hysterical and in the perfect setting. So Friday will have a fun theme.

But between now and then there is a lot to do. Wednesday the Armory opens, so it and Scope will dominate my time. Thursday, my longest and most artful day, looks to be most promising. The night itself will be action packed starting with a Jose Parla opening at Bryce Wolkowitz gallery. Bryce and his wife are friends, so I'll be attending the dinner as well, but in between I'm heading over to the Fizzy Water Panel at Phillips downtown. it is a discussion about what sculpture is today, hosted by my friend Marina Kurikhina of 360 Bespoke and including Simon de Pury. After all that I'll be topping my night off at my home base, The Woolly, the social venue downtown at the Woolworth building that one of my best friend runs and I helped design. That night there is a party hosted by Invisible-Exports and Smith-Stewart with installation work by Fay Ray and Alexander May (a pal) to celebrate the opening of the Moving Image fair, ANOTHER fair I'm excited to check out. Wow there's a lot to see...
